Father DARKLEAF'S Column

Father Darkleaf has always wanted one of those huge flat-top desks, such as Mussolini has, for we read that that plus a chair is all that gaces his office.

Across the plateau of such a desk the world must take on a roller. It would also forbid piling up of odds and ends of mail, notes and papers.

But now I must face disillusion about the desk, for I have heard the "desk" used by J. R. Horeley at the local CWA office.

Mr. Horeley's inventive hand has contrived to spread a flat board across the top of an upturned barrel and, ladies and gentlemen, is his desk! Unmolested by gadgets and luxury. Business in the raw!

The luxury of leisure is a field I have never been so fortunate as to explore. Fortune has always to me withheld courses that maintain a pace of from 10 to 18 hours per day, NKA or no.

There is a certain time between three and five A. M. when I am unable to classify as late night or early morning. And, to me, there is a whole of a difference.

There is much difference between three and five A. M. as there is between Dillinger and, say Morton Wilkes, a old stand-by.

This civilization of ours harbors no finer sentiment than the emotion which causes a housewife to get up at five in the kitchen at five. So seriously did I take writing a column in those days.

Most of the glamor of life may take place before two A. M. but the older I become the more respect I have for the five A. M. fellows.

Series of daring bank robberies over nation. Big league baseball clubs in spring training!
